We collect and keep only information that is necessary for the provision of services that you request, for the purposes of fraud prevention and to provide you with better customer services. Only employees of The Ultimate Disco with a valid business reason have access to your personal information.

You have certain rights in respect of the data we hold relating to you. You are entitled, on payment of a fee, to a copy of the information we hold about you. Certain remedies may be available to you if that data is incorrect or if you suffer loss as a result of any breach by us of the Act.

As permitted by law, we only share your personal information with non-affiliated companies or individuals, to comply with legal or regulatory requirements.

Please note that emails may not be secure and maybe intercepted by third parties. If you send us an email containing confidential information about you, you agree that you do so at your own risk and that you do not hold The Ultimate Disco responsible for any loss that you may suffer as a result.

In order to measure the use of our web site and make improvements to it, information may be gathered on users' visits to the site. This involves logging domain names of visitors and any sites they may have been directed from. This information is aggregated for monitoring.

From time to time, we may use customer information for new, unanticipated uses not previously disclosed in our privacy notice. If our information practices change at some time in the future we will post the policy changes to our Web site to notify you of these changes and provide you with the ability to opt out of these new uses. If you are concerned about how your information is used, you should check back at our Web site periodically.
